"Change the World"

*Satan's dancing in the streets because the churches are still closed
But his smile's begun to fade, and I just thought you ought to know.
More and more his plan is failing: it is backfiring instead.
As God's people we are rising - not just curling up in bed.
Ev'rywhere the world is praying - even those who never prayed.
We are phoning one another - checking in on them today.
More are studying the Bible - some who never did before.
We can't leave it to the preacher: we don't see him any more.
We are calling friends and fam'ly that we haven't seen in years.
We're forgiving and forgiven things and wiping 'way the tears.
Building bridges that we've burned but were too proud to e'er repair.
Life's too short to hold those grudges: let them go - move on from there.*

*Celebrate the great Creator as we witness all He brings
As we wave good-bye to Winter and rejoice and welcome Spring.
Life is different now than anyone on Earth has ever known,
But we make adjustments, trusting in the God who loves us so.
Satan has not won: He will not win as long as we believe
There is Someone so much greater watching over you and me.
We will trust in God and serve Him any way that we still can:
He has never failed us yet, and Satan needs to understand
That a tiny little virus may have changed the world today,
But it has not, can not, will not take our love for God away.
We are God's, and He is ours: we could not have a better friend.
Change the world, but we'll still love the One who loves us without end.*

This poem was recently written by a friend of my parents. I thought it was very appropriate and encouraging at this time. I appreciate her allowing me to share it.
