More Thoughts from an Old Friend

I love the Christmas season. I love the spirit of generosity that seems to overtake us more at Christmas time. I love all the talk about peace and the extra effort that we seem to exert to promote peace. I love every reference to good will among us. I love the sights and sounds of the Christmas season.

We are in universal agreement that generosity, peace and good will are the essence of the Spirit of Christ. As Christians, we are especially sensitive to this great truth. We also know that the Spirit of Christ is not seasonal. It is designed for every day and for all seasons.

The world hears about the Spirit of Christ. But it is up to us as Christians to show the world what that spirit is by demonstrating it in our lives for all to see. The Bible says, "If any man does not have the Spirit of Christ, he is not one of His" (Romans 8:9).

The Spirit of Christ is truly the spirit of giving. God loved the world that He gave His Son (John 3:16). The Son love and gave His life as a ransom for all (Matthew 20:28). And what is the best gift? It is perfectly fine to hand a person a gift wrapped in pretty paper. There is joy in giving and receiving such gifts. But these are small tokens. The greatest gift of all is the gift of self as we reach out in love and warmth to give of our very selves in caring concern for others.

The Sprit of Christ is the spirit of good will. This spirit is not selective. It is not designed for a special few who happen to be easy to love. The love of God embraces the world—so must ours. Such love is best characterized by our constant attempts to affect in a good way our fellow human beings. It may express itself in a bag of groceries, a simple word of encouragement or some time spent helping another person bear the burdens of the day.

And peace—yes, that too. "Blessed are the peacemakers" (Matthew 5:9) "Follow peace with all men, and holiness, without which no man shall see the Lord" (Hebrews 12:14).

It is the privilege of all Christians to preserve what is the very best of the Christmas season and share it in all seasons."
